I would wait for the day to come and not give a monkeys if I was hung over. I remember when I was about 8 a grandad took me to this Chinese restaurant and started eating from a huge plate of lamb's liver. I've always been a bit of a rebellious little lad. My dad was always going to football on a Sunday, and his mates all went to church. In contrast, my grandma would go to church and then eat. So I would have to go and lie down on a sofa and have the sleepover. I used to like watching football on a Sunday. I remember my granddad telling me I'd never be a player because I was too busy at football. I used to get bored with the same old games, so I always had to get involved in something that required a bit of brain power. I remember I had a projector in my room and I used to watch all the Champions League games with my friends. We'd put the projector in the window and just watch the game. We'd sit there and make our own commentary. I was 11 when I went to watch this big 2-1 win for Real Madrid against Barcelona. I was in the away end. I remember I watched this ball come in, and that's when I fell in love with football. I was 14 and went to watch the match on ITV. It was a European tie, and we were at Villa Park for the Europa League Final. The atmosphere was amazing. After the game, I'd be starving. We'd go up to the hotel, I'd get a room, then I'd go back down and finish watching the game. I was going to Villa Park 82157476af
